PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Thank you! Thank you for dedicating your time, energy and talents to advance public education in Virginia. Your dedication is appreciated by parents, the community and most importantly the students in the Commonwealth. Governor Terry McAuliffe has officially recognized February as School Board Appreciation Month; the Governor's proclamation is available on the VSBA website, along with a School Board Appreciation Month resource guide (click here).

The General Assembly is currently in session as I write this article. Advocating for public education is a primary mission of the VSBA and I believe it is a vital role for each and every school board member. We know that many of you have been responding to our VSBA Action Alerts and monitoring our blog, Facebook page, and Twitter feed. I salute you for a job well done and encourage you to keep it up throughout the year.

VSBA Board of Directors, staff and many of you have been very busy talking with your legislators at the state and federal levels this year. VSBA has offered several platforms for you to interact with your legislators, including the VSBA Task Force Day on the Hill, the Capital Conference, and the NSBA Advocacy Institute. Photos and information from each of these events is included in this issue of the newsletter.

The VSBA has a wonderful in-house resource in Emily Webb, our government relations coordinator. She is available to provide you with information on bills pending in Richmond and Washington, as well as guidance on how to approach your legislators or to advocate for public education in your locality.

We also have Bob Hundley working on our behalf. Bob is chair of Hanover County School Board and serves on the VSBA Board of Directors as the Legislative Positions and Federal Relations Chairman. Bob is doing a phenomenal job is promoting the VSBA agenda to both state and federal legislators. He has been spending many hours in Richmond and Washington scheduling meetings and talking with staff and legislators, and I sincerely thank him for his efforts.

As former chair of the Federal Relations Network Committee, I can personally attest to the success of lobbying and advocating for public education. Personal contact makes a difference.

A few of the bills that Emily and Bob are following as I write this article include:

HB1672 – This legislation repeals the A-F school grading system and requires the Board of Education, in consultation with the SOL Innovation Committee, to redesign the School Performance Report Card.

SB866 – This bill allows local school boards and local governments to participate in the state employee health plan.

HB1873 and SB1320 – These bills direct the Board of Education to develop regulations establishing additional accreditation ratings that recognize the progress of schools that do not meet accreditation benchmarks.

This is just a sample of the numerous bills that have an impact on public education and are being tracked. For up-to-the-minute updates, be sure to monitor the VSBA Legislative Blog referenced earlier.

Advocating for public education is a year around job, and shouldn't just occur during the General Assembly. It can take place in the grocery store, at your churches or synagogues, or at the ball game. It is always a good time to talk about public education, and as school board members were are education's greatest advocates.

Again, congratulations on School Board Appreciation Month. Have a great spring and thank you for all that you do.

FEBRUARY is School Board Appreciation Month & FEBRUARY 16-20 is School Board Clerk Appreciation Week

Thank you for all that you do as leaders, advocates, and supporters of public education. The work that you do is valued and vitally important for the future of our communities, state, and nation.

Virginia Middle School Research Alliance

Aimee Evan
Virginia Middle School
Research Alliance Lead

The Virginia Middle School Research Alliance (VMSRA) is filling a need among divisions and middle schools in our state: helping educators understand how to effectively use data for short- and long-term planning so they can best help students succeed. In this era of accountability, divisions, schools, and even classrooms are flooded with data, from SOL assessments to interim and formative assessments, classroom assignments, attendance and discipline records, to name a few. But educators need tools to effectively use this wealth of information to identify key areas of concern or success among students, determine the causes or sources for student challenges, develop potential solutions, and monitor students' progress. The mission of the VMSRA is to develop these skills among its partner divisions and middle school administrators and teachers.

"Our goal is to build the capacity of middle school leaders and teachers to use data to inform decision-making and improve student performance," said Aimee Evan, VMSRA's lead coordinator, "Everything the VMSRA does grows out of what our Alliance members tell us they need—we take our cues from our partner divisions and middle schools. This is a highly collaborative effort. Alliance members bring their expertise and needs to the table, we at REL Appalachia bring what we know, and we find expertise within and outside of the state so we can learn from each other and help students."

Margaret Gheen
Virginia Middle School
Research Alliance Researcher

The VMSRA is one of several alliances supported by the Regional Educational Laboratory Appalachia (REL Appalachia), which is funded by the U.S. Department of Education's Institute for Education Sciences (IES). IES funds ten RELs across the nation, each focusing on supporting the research- and data-use needs of geographic clusters of states. REL Appalachia has alliances serving Virginia, West Virginia, Kentucky, and Tennessee. REL Appalachia's VMSRA works specifically with representatives from Virginia's divisions, middle schools, and the Virginia Department of Education.

The VMSRA hosted two all-day workshops and monthly call-in meetings to build capacity to use data effectively to identify and meet students' needs. Participants in the workshops and call-in meetings learned from experts in data use and heard from colleagues in Virginia divisions and middle schools who are transforming how they "do business" by (1) organizing their divisions and schools to support effective data use, (2) developing the skills and knowledge they need to use data, and (3) improving data, data systems, and educators' access to data.

This year, the VMSRA is planning more workshops, call-in meetings, and webinars for its members. The first workshop, anticipated to be held in April in Roanoke, VA, will focus on helping school teams analyze student work samples to pin-point specific challenges in students' learning, identify the sources of those challenges, and begin to develop potential instructional solutions to these challenges. "We heard from our members they're cautious about jumping right to solutions, and that makes sense," explained Ms. Evan, "Educators don't want to waste their time on things that won't work for their kids, they want to target their efforts by making informed decisions about what students need and why. So at this workshop we will start at the beginning: we'll start with the student." A second workshop, designed for superintendents and their staff, will walk participants through analyzing their data to begin to identify systemic issues that might be plaguing divisions.

The VMSRA welcomes new members. Interested members are encouraged to join as a team of division and middle school leadership and instructional staff. "We encourage joining as a team, because we know from research and experience that effective data use happens when there is collaboration among staff within and across school organizations," explained Ms. Evan.

Social Media and Records Retention Rules

Elizabeth Ewing, director, legal and policy services

Many Virginians think of the Library of Virginia (LVA), if they think of it at all, as the repository of priceless historical documents. For example, the Library's collection includes one of only 12 surviving original signed copies of the Bill of Rights and one-of-a-kind sources for genealogical research. Preservation of those irreplaceable documents is vitally important to all Virginians, but the Library is also intimately involved with much more modern documents. The Public Records Act charges the Library with the responsibility for issuing rules regarding the preservation and destruction of public records. Those records include documents written on parchment and paper as well as electronic documents.

One type of electronic document that has only been created in the past few years is documents such as tweets and posts to social media accounts. Although many school board members may not have considered the records retention implications of using social media, it is clear that the electronic records associated with social media are covered by the LVA's records retention rules. Thus, each division needs to have a plan for retaining social media posts and for producing those posts when required by the Freedom of Information Act, during litigation or otherwise. The length of time that each post must be retained is determined based on the content of the message, not its format. In other words, the retention period for each post is the same period that would apply if the post had been distributed via a traditional letter or email.

Each school board determines how it retains posts that are under its control. When the school board does not have control of the post, the board needs to determine what records it can retain, such as confirmations of each posting or screenshots. Each school board, or its records officer, should consider these issues when it reviews contracts with social networking sites and the settings configuration for each social networking account. In addition, individuals who want to communicate via social media should learn their division's practices and be sure to follow them. Recognizing that social media posts are public records is the first step to following the records retention rules. The next step is know how your division complies with those rules.

2015 VSBA Showcases for Success

WHAT IS THE VSBA SHOWCASES FOR SUCCESS?

As a means of encouraging community awareness and positive press coverage of public education, the Virginia School Boards Association is inviting school divisions to recommend programs and initiatives that would serve as appropriate "Showcases for Success" in public education. Last year, more than 100 programs were profiled and the list was shared with journalists, school board members, superintendents, legislators, and top state officials. Press coverage was generated statewide, and this project served to be an effective tool for disarming the critics of public education. We are compiling a new list for 2015, and these successful programs will be showcased on the VSBA web site for the entire year.

WHAT ARE THIS YEAR'S CATEGORIES?

The submission categories are Virtual/Blended Learning and Career & Technical Education.

HOW MANY PROGRAMS/INITIATIVES CAN A DIVISION SUBMIT?

Each division can submit up to 3 programs/initiatives. The submissions do not all have to be in the same category, which enables divisions to highlight both Virtual/Blended Learning and Career & Technical Education programs.

HOW CAN I SUBMIT?

Superintendent Evaluation: Developing a Model to Meet VDOE Guidelines

- What are the new requirements?
- What is the difference between standards and indicators, and how will they be measured?
- Who establishes the cut scores for performance ratings?
- What types of student achievement goals can be used and how will they be rated?
- What level of goal achievement is required for a proficient rating?

The Guidelines for Uniform Performance Standards and Evaluation Criteria for Superintendents developed by the Virginia Department of Education provide a wealth of information regarding the new requirements. Filtering through this document to determine what is required and what is optional requires focused attention. For some, the changes to their current evaluation model may be minor, while others face major revisions in order to be in compliance with the regulations.

This workshop is designed to provide small group support to superintendents and board members responsible for updating their evaluation model. Participants will have the opportunity to review the guidelines in detail and then use them as they draft their own models. Individual consultation and support will be provided throughout the session as participants work on their revisions.

Facilitated Board Self-Evaluation

Board self-evaluation provides more than just accountability and communication. It provides an opportunity for building the best possible leadership for the division and community. Commitment to quality, excellence, continuous learning, and local control of the educational system is demonstrated when boards lead by example. The VSBA has developed a facilitated self-evaluation process that will assist your board in its continuing commitment to focus on and increase student achievement.

What NASCAR and School Boards Have in Common

C. ED MASSEY, Past President, National School Boards Association

NASCAR is one of America's most popular sports. Victory in a NASCAR race is often decided by thousandths of seconds. A commitment to excellence and teamwork is necessary to propel a team to victory lane. This session will evaluate the concepts and principles within NASCAR that are analogous to school district operations. Teamwork is only successful if each participant knows their role and executes that role to perfection. Each participant in NASCAR is comparable to participants in the educational process. From team owners to fans and vendors, all have a place just as in education.

Administrators, teachers, board members, students and parents all play specific roles. This session will break down these responsibilities with the ultimate goal of putting your district in "victory lane"!

Reshaping Content, Engaging Students: What Board Members Need to Know APPLE INC.

For a generation of paper-centric school leaders, the rapid acceleration from print to digital content raises lots of questions. How do students take notes? Is the online textbook the same as the print? What is the advantage of using digital content? How do school systems manage the shift? In addition, take a hands-on tour with Apple to learn how the iPad is changing the learning experience, making it more engaging, interactive, and completely mobile.

2015 Capital Conference Recap

This year's Capital Conference included greetings and commentary from Governor Terry McAuliffe, Secretary of Education Anne Holton, State Superintendent of Public Instruction Steve Staples, and Virginia Chamber of Commerce President Barry DuVal. The two-day conference provided an opportunity for public education stakeholders to be seen and heard by their legislators and other government officials. Day one included speakers on a variety of education "hot topics", such as budget, upcoming legislation, and changes in the political climate, followed by a reception with delegates and senators. Day two included personal visits by attendees with their legislators.

Who Are My Legislators ?

VSBA Task Force Day on the Hill

On January 20, members of the VSBA Task Force on Schools in Challenging Environments and the VSBA Task Force on Virtual Learning hosted the "VSBA Task Force Day on the Hill" to provide legislators the opportunity to learn about the important work that has been conducted by these two task forces. A dozen legislators or their staff members met with the task force representatives.

COMMUNICATIONS TIP: Think Outside-In, not Inside-Out

When developing your division’s communications program, how often have you considered the perspective by which you are creating the program?

It may be helpful to consider things from the “Outside-In” perspective. Rather than the school division being the “client” for your communications program, what if your community of stakeholders was the client? How would thinking of your stakeholders as your focus and priority, rather than the division, change your approach? This change in perspective can have a significant impact on your communications program.

NSBA Advocacy Institute and Day on the Hill

Washington, D.C.

In early February, twenty-five of your school board colleagues participated in NSBA’s 2015 Advocacy Institute. While at the Advocacy Institute they gained knowledge on how to be an effective advocate from legal, legislative, and public advocacy experts, and received an update on federal legislation moving through Congress. Armed with expert information, your school board colleagues met with members of the Virginia Congressional delegation including Senators Mark Warner and Tim Kaine, and Representatives Bobby Scott, Rob Wittman, Bob Goodlatte, Robert Hurt, and Dave Brat. These successful meetings allowed VSBA to share our thoughts and stories on ESEA reauthorization, IDEA funding, sequestration, and reauthorization of the Child Nutrition Act. All of the members of our Congressional delegation were receptive to VSBA’s message of increased local control and flexibility.

Thank you to all of those board members who participated in the 2015 Advocacy Institute and Day on the Hill. VSBA looks forward to continuing to work with all of our board members and members of Congress to ensure a robust public education system for the Commonwealth.
