VSBA Take Your Legislator to School Month

November 2025

November is VSBA Take Your Legislator to School Month

Building a closer relationship between public education and lawmakers serving in the Virginia General Assembly is essential to the well-being of our students. The Virginia School Boards Association (VSBA) urges each school division in the state to invite at least one of their state legislators to visit their schools during the month of November.

The benefits of participating in the VSBA Take Your Legislator to School Month provide opportunities for developing closer relationships between school divisions, local communities, and our elected officials. A successful legislative visit can spur further dialogue providing education and political leaders the platform to work together to ensure that we provide the best possible education for our students.

What Types of Activities Can We Implement?

There are a variety of activities that your division can do when hosting legislators. These include luncheons/breakfasts, speaking to civics classes, reading to younger students, discussing the Virginia legislative process, etc. The precise format for each visit should be discussed between the division or school and the legislator, but we recommend each visit include a tour of school facilities conducted by a board member or other division representatives. Use this opportunity to raise awareness of division successes, showcase a program that a legislator helped fund, or highlight division needs that have gone unmet.

Promote & Celebrate Your Visit

- ❑ After you have issued your invitation and planned the visit, distribute a media alert (sample enclosed) and invite the media to cover the visit.
- ❑ Take pictures/video and include a story about the meeting in your division newsletter, as well as on division social media accounts, and the division website. If your division has a school-based media class/club with student reporters, this is a good way to involve students in providing news coverage that can be used by the division in promoting the meeting.
- ❑ Have participating students send handwritten thank you letters to the legislator.
- ❑ Notify the VSBA of your activities. We may attend your events or promote them in the VSBA Daily News and social media feeds. Please send photos to communications@vsba.org and use hashtag #VALeg2school when posting to social media.

We hope you will take advantage of this opportunity to strengthen the already solid bond between public education and the Virginia General Assembly. These activities will aid VSBA as it lobbies on your behalf on education issues. Thank you for all that you do as a leader, advocate, and supporter of public education. If you have any questions, please contact VSBA Director of Legislative Services, J.T. Kessler, at jason@vsba.org or (434) 295-8722.

VSBA Grassroots Advocacy

Grassroots advocacy and local school boards

School board members play a critical role in advocating for their local school division. The advocacy efforts of school board members not only impact the outcomes of students and teachers within your division, but are also vital to preserving local control of school division operations in the Commonwealth.

The advocacy you undertake within your local school division greatly assists the efforts of the VSBA Government Relations team. It is often mentioned by legislators to our team when they have heard from a member of their local school board or when a member visits them in Richmond. The information you share with legislators is invaluable as not every Senator or Delegate is an expert on K-12 education. If they do not hear from you, they will hear from someone else — making it imperative to share your story.

Your Role as a Grassroots Advocate

Grassroots advocacy is described as any advocacy activity that takes place at the local or community level. Grassroots advocacy involves identifying, adopting, and promoting a cause that shapes public perception or influence public policy; it is a process by which stakeholders (school board members) make their voices heard.

Grassroots advocacy is very effective for associations as school board members have tremendous power to generate change within the public policy sphere. Grassroots advocacy is different from lobbying as it involves school board members, rather than professional lobbyists, educating their legislators and other government officials on how legislation and regulations will impact the school division and community. Examples of grassroots advocacy include meeting with and educating members of the Virginia General Assembly, members of Congress, or other policy makers on the impact of a specific policy matter.

As school board members, it is up to each of you to advocate for quality public education for all Virginia students. Using a collective voice helps policy makers understand the issues that matter to school board members across the Commonwealth. It is important that policy makers hear from school board members so they can create and implement legislation that supports public education, families, and the communities each of you represent.

The possibilities are endless when it involves bringing legislators to your schools. Do not be afraid to be creative and think outside the box. Your legislators want to know what is happening in your school division.

VSBA Grassroots Advocacy

In all of your interactions with policymakers and staff members, remember these key points:

Stay positive and nonpartisan. Do not threaten a legislator (“I won’t vote for you if you don’t support this legislation!”) It is important not to alienate your legislator because you may need his/her support on later issues. Keep the focus on public education.

Be personal. Visits to schools where you can share your divisions positives and concerns during a visit will lead to a more successful event because the legislator will have a visual take away from what they saw. Be sure to have a physical one pager that highlights your visit for the legislator or staff to take with them after the visit.

Be patient when getting to know legislators, especially if they are new to the Virginia General Assembly. Building relationships with your legislative delegation can require multiple interactions.

Stay on message. Focus your visit on one or two issues.

Avoid providing inaccurate information. It is far better to tell a legislator, “I don’t know, but I will find out and get back to you.” Your credibility (and the legislator’s if he/she uses your information) is at stake. Make sure to follow up with the complete information.

Have fun! Having your legislative delegation visit your school(s) is a great opportunity for all parties involved.

Quick Tips & Suggestions

- Discuss what your school division or school would like to get out of a visit with a state legislator and phrase your invitation accordingly.
- Be sensitive to the fact that every school and division has at least two representatives in the legislature: a senator and a delegate. School divisions may have multiple senators and delegates serving in the legislature.
- Invite each of your legislators. While some may not respond to your invitation, others might feel slighted at not receiving one.
- Thank the legislator for their past support for public education.
- Help the legislator decide which activities and topics would be appropriate for specific age groups. Legislators may have received some suggestions from the clerks, but school staff might help them plan others.
- Obtain the legislator's biography from his or her office or website for use in introductions and news releases.
- Be alert to promising opportunities for photos. Sometimes that alone will be enough to attract newspaper or TV media coverage.
- Use Hashtag #VALeg2school when posting on social media.
- Apprise the VSBA of your activities, past and planned, to help us promote this event this year and in future years.
- VSBA Take Your Legislator to School Month should be just one part of ongoing year-round communication that takes place between your division and members of the Virginia General Assembly.

Understanding Virginia's Government

The Virginia General Assembly

The Virginia General Assembly is composed of two chambers — the Senate of Virginia and the Virginia House of Delegates. Each chamber has its own committee structure and elected leadership.

The Senate of Virginia consists of 40 members that are elected to serve four-year terms. The Virginia House of Delegates has 100 members that are elected to serve two-year terms. Members of the General Assembly may not hold any other elected public office during their term as a Senator or Delegate.

Pursuant to the Constitution, the General Assembly convenes for a Regular Session on the second Wednesday of January. In even-numbered years, the legislature meets for 60 calendar days and in odd-numbered years meets for 30 calendar days but is customarily extended to 46 calendar days. Occasionally, the legislature must extend beyond their projected ending date. In either an even-numbered or odd-numbered year, the legislature may not extend beyond an additional 30 calendar days. The legislature may be called into Special Session by the Governor at any time and may call itself into Special Session if two-thirds of the members elected to each house petition for a Special Session to be convened.

Since 1980, the legislature has constitutionally been required to convene a Reconvened Session on the sixth Wednesday after adjournment of any Session (Regular or Special). The purpose of the Reconvened Session is to consider any Governor's amendments or vetoes to legislation communicated to him for action. The Reconvened Session typically lasts one day; however, it may last three days and can be extended an additional seven days.

One of the primary responsibilities of the General Assembly during a legislative session is to enact a balanced budget. In even-numbered years, the General Assembly adopts a two-year or biennial budget. After the Governor, as the chief planning and budget officer, prepares the biennial budget, the General Assembly then modifies the budget accordingly. The General Assembly also increases or decreases proposed funding levels. In odd numbered years, the House and Senate address unexpected increases or decreases in revenue and modifies the budget accordingly.

The Constitution of Virginia and the Rules for procedure that each Chamber of the Virginia General Assembly adopt for session outline the process for which legislation can become law. Any member of the General Assembly can propose legislation. To assist in the process, proposed legislation generally begins with the Senator or Delegate meeting with the Division of Legislative Services where a staff attorney checks existing law and reviews the proposed legislation for any potential issues over its constitutionality. After this review, the proposed legislation is drafted by legislative services and upon completion, the Senator or Delegate signs their name to the legislation and files it with the Clerk of the respective chamber in which they serve.

The legislation is then referred by the Senate Clerk or the Speaker of the House to a Standing Committee. In the House of Delegates, there are 14 Standing Committees, while the Senate of Virginia has 11 Standing Committees.

The committee structure is an essential component of the legislative process because it is where the bulk of the General Assembly's work is done. While in Committee, the public has opportunity to provide testimony on the merits of the legislation. It is during the testimony and "mark-up" process that legislation is most easily amended prior to a full vote by the Standing Committee. The Standing Committee can vote to "approve" the legislation with or without amendments. If the legislation is approved by the Standing Committee, it heads to the floor for debate by the entire Senate or House chamber.

During session, the daily meetings, floor calendars, and legislation being considered can be accessed on the Legislative Information System website.

The Executive Branch

Virginia has three state-wide Constitutional offices, Governor, Lieutenant Governor, and Attorney General. Each are elected to four-year terms and are charged with specific duties found in the Constitution of Virginia. The Governor is barred from serving consecutive four-year terms but can serve multiple terms in office. The Lieutenant Governor and Attorney General can serve consecutive terms with no limits.

Executive branch leaders enforce and implement laws passed by the Virginia General Assembly. The enforcement and implementation of laws is typically done through executive branch departments, agencies, boards, and commissions.

Executive branch departments, agencies, boards and commissions are authorized to issue regulations based on the legislative directive found in laws passed by the General Assembly. During this process, stakeholders are often consulted and asked to weigh in on a variety of proposed regulations.

After a regulation is proposed, it is published on the Virginia Town Hall website with an opportunity for public input by a certain deadline. The regulation may be the subject of multiple revisions and one or more administrative hearings. School board member input during this comment process is just as important as during the legislative process. Once the final version is published, the regulation is implemented. At any time, a department, agency, board, or commission may also subsequently update, revise, or rescind a regulation or any part of it, during which this comment process repeats.

Rules governing the regulatory process are found in Virginia's Administrative Process Act.
